NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

"It Had to Be You" is a moderate ballad chart with a swing feel. The saxes play the introduction with a C pedal note for the rhythm section; make sure the pedal notes are sustained and not played short. The 1st trumpet solo begins at measure 4 and should be played smooth, legato, and lyrical but not too relaxed; otherwise it will be difficult to maintain a steady tempo. Make sure the background saxes stay under the trumpet soloist. The saxes can sing out at measure 13 for their soli, striving for a nice section blend, and then back down in volume at 21 behind the trumpet solo. During the sax soli, it is important for the entire section to sustain the phrases and release together. Moderate vibrato would be a nice addition but is not essential. Vibrato for the saxophone is done with the jaw by practicing "ya ya" exercises. Practice this technique to allow the vibrato to be controlled and even. Begin slowly and build skill gradually.

The rhythm section feel gradually moves from a two-beat to a swing-4 feel. At measure 37, the brass section should play the last eighth note short, as indicated. This will give more energy to the swing feel. The drumset player should begin the chart by playing time on the hi-hat and then move the ride cymbal at measure 28 as the music moves into a 4 feel. The guitar player should comp with quarter notes on the slash marks using a two or three-note chord focusing on the 3rd and 7th of each chord. The piano and guitar players should always position themselves so they can easily hear each other and then listen and share the comping duties; never overplay or clutter the comping backgrounds. The bass part is a clear example of a traditional bass part based on roots, fifths, and leading tones.

Please enjoy!
