

Firestorm

By John O'Reilly

October 28, 2007 began as a typically beautiful Southern California day. But as the composer sat at his piano writing this composition, he became aware of a major firestorm raging within a few miles of his house. Dense smoke filled the air and a steady stream of helicopters flew into the local reservoir to fill up with water to battle the flames.

What started as a bright majestic fanfare soon became an agitated Allegro Vivace. A three-part woodwind ostinato pattern in Dorian mode combined with prominent percussion establishes a base for the powerful brass statements that follow. The firestorm was brought under control in a few days and the slow, lyrical middle section is a reflection of the relief the composer felt knowing that his neighborhood was spared.
