NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

This great jazz standard by Bernie Miller features trumpet and tenor sax with the melody and solos. The arrangement should be played as a bright swing, as indicated at the tempo of $\text{♩} = 180$.

There are written-out solos provided for both trumpet and tenor which also include chord symbols in case the players are capable of improvising.

There are several marcato or roof-top (▲) accents throughout the chart. Direct the band to observe these and play them detached with a strong attack—think “daht.” Take notice of releases, because an ensemble that releases together will sound more mature and professional. Clean releases are just as important as accurate articulation.

There is a four-measure send-off for the tenor solo at measure 34—make it strong, full, and then bring down the dynamic for the soloist.

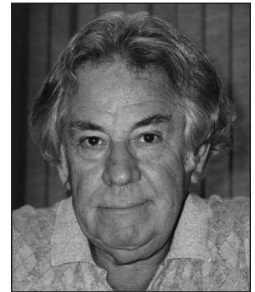

The ensemble shout chorus section beginning at measure 66 should start very soft and build quickly into 67. Play these ensemble figures lightly, but maintain a high level of intensity at the same time. Typically, if the band plays too loud, it will likely slow down the tempo. The ensemble can play full but should not overblow.

The drum part shows the ensemble figures. The bass part is written out but I have added chord changes behind the soloists if needed. The piano part is also fully written out but an experienced player can embellish as needed for comping purposes. The guitar comping slashes are the basic four beats to the swing comping style.

As always, please observe all of the dynamics in this chart.

Enjoy!
