NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

“Deck the Halls” is a traditional Christmas carol, based on a sixteenth-century Welsh song and first published with lyrics in 1866. For my arrangement, I chose to set the tune to a calypso beat, a musical style originating in Trinidad and Tobago that became popular in the United States during the 1950s. The best-known calypso-influenced jazz tune is Sonny Rollins’s “St. Thomas,” which I recommend playing for your students to give them a feel for the style.

The backbone of calypso rhythm is the repeated clavé pattern that the rhythm section plays throughout this arrangement:

All rhythm section members should strive for a light, relaxed sound and try to lock in with the drummer’s continuous bass/hi-hat quarter notes. The written drum fills are only suggestions, and the drummer should feel free to improvise his or her own, as long as a relaxed and somewhat authentic style is maintained.

Wind players should also play lightly throughout the piece, being careful not to tongue too hard on the short articulations. Listening to Sonny Rollins’s articulations on “St. Thomas” will help with this. Dynamically, the climax of the arrangement occurs at measure 72. Make sure your students play very softly starting at measure 58 so they have plenty of room to crescendo.

For young bands, the most challenging aspect of the piece will be the syncopated rhythms, especially this recurring rhythm in the melody:

I suggest having your students write out the counting for this rhythm and practice chanting it until they’re able to correctly place all the off beats. Hearing you sing the words of the song and then echoing them can also help the students learn the rhythm.

Solos at measure 42 can be opened up to give more students an opportunity to improvise. The entire solo can be played with the concert E \flat major scale, and with only two chords, this could be a great opportunity to introduce improvising over simple changes.

Regarding articulation, the staccato is of course played short, but not too short or clipped. The marcato (♩) notes are played detached, accented, and for their full values. I also suggest that the ensemble give full value to the dotted half notes by using consistent and accurate releases.

Good luck and have fun with my arrangement of “Deck the Halls”!
