NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

John Coltrane has long been one of my favorite musicians! In arranging this classic tune, I tried to keep the integrity of the original version while still pushing the harmonic and rhythmic language ahead a bit. I hope you enjoy the results.

The introduction contains several drum solos. The drummer's main job at this point is not necessarily to be flashy, but to play with good "time" and ensure that the rest of the band will play their rhythmic figures accurately.

All the glissandi (i.e., m. 18, m. 41, etc.) can be fairly dramatic.

The chord progression is an integral part of the beauty of the composition. Starting with the solo section at m. 69, I've kept the original chord changes until m. 99, at which point I've altered them slightly. For help in improvising on this tune, I highly recommend that all soloists listen to (and transcribe) the solos from the original Coltrane recording. For more inspiration, do the same with the wonderful solos on the demo version of this arrangement, available at alfred.com/downloads.

Because there is so much saxophone soli writing, please take extra time to achieve the proper section balance and blend. Similarly, direct the brass section to balance and blend during their soli passages, especially the internal parts.

Thanks for your interest in this arrangement. As always, I hope the band enjoys performing it!
