PROGRAM NOTES

In September of 2013, Colorado experienced the worst flood in over a hundred years. In just 3 days, many parts of the state received as much rainfall as they normally do in a year! Quiet streams became raging rivers, flooding canyons and destroying roads, homes, and businesses. Having moved to Colorado just a week and a half before the flood, I witnessed firsthand the amazing resiliency of the people who live in the communities that were devastated by the flood. Although many had lost everything, they remained committed to rebuilding their towns, their roads, and their lives. A new phrase soon emerged and began spreading here and there. On shirts and on bumper stickers it describes these amazing people who are indeed "Mountain Strong."

This march is a tribute to this new mantra and the people it represents.
