

The menuet is a dance of French origin. It is said that King Louis XIV danced the “very first” menuet, composed by Lully in 1653. Menuets were originally played at a very moderate tempo but later took on considerably more speed. They should always be played with graceful dignity.

This selection is sometimes called the “Lute Prelude,” because it was composed for lute. Bach may have played it on his own lute-clavecin (a harpsichord fitted with lute strings).
