NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

“Fiesta Latina” is a jazz-flavored Latin-style arrangement with an easy chord progression. Accurate articulation is always important but especially critical in Latin music. Attacks and releases that are executed together give much more impact to the overall sound of the band. The sections and ensemble can deliver more focus and projection and yet play with less volume with an accurate attack. Accurate releases will also make a band play tighter with a clean sound. For example, in measure 8, the saxes and trumpets should release together on beat 4. This can be notated as “off on 4” or “-4.” The band should be careful to play the triplets evenly and smoothly, which will contrast with the rhythmic accents throughout this arrangement. When the melody is in thirds, such as the trumpets in measure 25, make certain the parts are balanced evenly.

The recurring 2-3 rhythmic pattern is known as a clave. The term “clave” literally means “key” in Spanish. In this chart, the claves and sometimes the guitar play in clave as well. This rhythmic pattern should be accurate, smooth, and consistent, but caution the percussionists not to overpower the ensemble. The clave pattern is very important in all Latin styles and should be recognized as an essential part of the style.

Measure 49 begins a melodic and rhythmic pattern with the rhythm section and baritone saxophone. Articulation should be uniform throughout the ensemble in this section as the layers build into the tenor saxophone solo. Although the chord progression is provided, the soloist may want to stick close to the written solo the first few times to capture the flavor of the arrangement. After becoming comfortable with the style and the sound of the chord progression, the soloist should consider embellishment of the written solo as a way to experiment with improvisation. As the ensemble begins to play the backgrounds behind the soloist, caution the students not to overpower the soloist. However, the baritone sax player can dig into his or her background figures. I hope you enjoy this arrangement.
