NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

The legendary Count Basie is best remembered as a great bandleader, but he was also a prolific composer who penned many swing and blues tunes for his early bands. "Blue and Sentimental" illustrates his ability to write a lovely ballad.

My goal with this arrangement is to feature your soloists in this slow yet swinging style. Following an alto sax solo in the introduction, the melody is first stated by solo trumpet followed by trombone. Solos featuring tenor sax and piano follow, which are all written or ad libbed.

Observe the articulation in measure 13; think "doo-dit." Saxes should play full value to the dotted quarter notes in measure 31. Throughout this chart, all horn players should concentrate on releases; mark them if needed. The rhythm section should provide a smooth swing feel with a steady accompaniment. Practice with a metronome as needed.

The arrangement begins to build at measure 49 with the entrance of the brass followed by the saxes. The full ensemble plays the theme, and the chart ends with the return of the solo trumpet.

In measure 57, beat 3 can be the cut-off for the ensemble and the cue for the trumpet soloist.

Dynamics make ballads interesting and effective. Please observe them carefully, especially behind solos.

I hope your band enjoys playing this arrangement.
