

FOREWORD

Although "Awake the Harp" is one of many choruses of Haydn's CREATION, it has been selected as a single work because of its ability to stand alone as a great festive chorus. The inclusion of the recitative by solo voice or unison singers (tenors or sopranos) may further enhance its performance.

The analysis and phrasing indications are the editor's. They are based on the philosophy that the director and choir should both know the "musical-skeleton" of the piece before attempting to sing it, and that no two consecutive notes should receive exactly the same emphasis; rather, each must play an important (and active) part in the forward motion of the entire phrase, and eventually, the entire composition.

It must be kept in mind that all interpretive additions to a composition should be of a subtle nature, never drawing attention to themselves, and away from the creative ideas of the composer. The accents (˘) and stress marks (—) should only be employed to enhance the motion of the phrase, and not be obvious or obtrusive.

The breakdown, by measures, of the phrase structure is indicated by heavy, full barlines and numerical explanations placed at "beginning" measures. For example: 10 (6+4) = a ten-measure "section" divided into two shorter phrases of six and four measures.

It is essential that the performers are aware of each phrase and its relationship to those that precede and follow.

The editor gratefully acknowledges his debt to Dr. Julius Herford and Robert Shaw, whose teaching is the foundation of this edition.

The first system of the musical score consists of four vocal staves and a piano accompaniment. The vocal staves are arranged in a four-part setting (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass). The lyrics are: "song re - sound. Re - joice in the Lord, the". The piano accompaniment is in the right and left hands, providing harmonic support for the vocal lines. The music is in a key with two sharps (D major) and a 4/4 time signature.

The second system of the musical score continues the vocal and piano parts. The lyrics are: "might y God, Re - joice in the" for the first three staves, and "might y God, the" for the fourth staff. The piano accompaniment continues with a similar harmonic structure. The system concludes with a double bar line.
