

Ancient Airs and Dances

Suite 1 Balletto

Ottorino Respighi
Arranged by David Marlatt

Balletto detto "Il conte Orlando" after Simone Molinari

Respighi had a fascination with the music of the distant past, both from Italy and elsewhere. His orchestral elaborations of early repertoire are among his most frequently heard works today, including his three suites Ancient Airs and Dances which are essentially symphonic transcriptions of sixteenth and seventeenth century lute pieces.

Simone Molinaro (1570-1633) composed numerous collections of sacred and secular vocal works, and as a music publisher, brought out an important edition of Don Carlo Gesualdo's five-voice madrigals in 1603. Molinaro's Intavolatura di liuto libro primo is one of the most notable lute collections of its time. In that collection his Balletto detto "Il conte Orlando" appears as a triple-time dance. Respighi alters it to duple meter and in the middle provides contrast by transposing the melody into the minor mode, where the solo line is played dolce before the material is revisited in its original form by the full ensemble.
