About the Music

Ichabod Fanfare was commissioned by the Washburn University Wind Ensemble and its director, Dr. Mark Norman, in honor of alumnus Robert "Bob" Dole. The piece was premiered at the Kennedy Center with Dole's immediate family in attendance. The title "Ichabod" comes from the university's mascot, and the main themes from the work are drawn from the alma mater, though it is set in a much more contemporary orchestration.

The opening fanfare recurs throughout the work in variations, though the rhythmic motif in the 1st measure is constant throughout. The alma mater itself doesn't begin to appear until ms. 23 in the horns, moving into the piccolo. Additional fragments begin to appear at ms. 35 (oboe) and moves to piccolo, bassoon, tenor sax and euphonium. The first major climax of the work is at ms. 51 where all fragments finally come together and the tune is presented in the fullest form found in the composition, while the opening fanfare motif continues to build until the music finally returns to the exact opening material (presented with new harmonies and orchestration).

The intense harmonies of the final chord are somewhat released when the remainder of the ensemble comes in, lessening the effect of the half step interval, yet still providing the edge needed to complete the work.

This is easily one of my most contemporary pieces for wind band to date, and I am absolutely thrilled with the results.
