About the Music

As its title suggests, Enchantment is a piece that seeks to portray magical moments ranging from the most simple to the most powerful. It has an air of mystery and uncertainty that slowly transforms into feelings of power and confidence. Students should focus on communicating this change in emotion as the music develops. This piece presents an ideal opportunity for discussing musical expression so students understand how they need to make changes to the sound (dynamics and articulation) as the piece evolves. In addition, they should understand the overall arc of the piece (intensity should increase throughout the entire work before it suddenly diminishes at the end).

Enchantment was conceived during a trip to Asheville, North Carolina, where I was conducting at the American School Band Directors Association's National Convention. It was there that I met Robert Kroll, Director of Bands at West Middle School in Rochester Hills, Michigan. The piece is correlated with Measures of Success® Book 1, Opus 3. Wind players do not have any eighth notes and use very conservative ranges throughout. While no slurs are used in this piece, directors are welcome to teach students to connect beats 3 and 4 (either through tenuto articulations or through slurs). The demonstration recording features this approach.
