PROGRAM NOTES

Courage Undaunted by John M. Pasternak is inspired by the brave souls of pioneers past and present who ventured into the unknown in search of a better life. The westward journeys of the American pioneers were fraught with excitement, joy, promise and danger. This composition for the symphonic band draws upon those emotions to create a powerful experience for musician and audience alike.

NOTES TO CONDUCTOR

The introduction should be performed in a decidedly marcato style in the brass section. The woodwind responses should be carefully dynamically shaped to reinforce the momentum of the introductory statement.

Please note the subito dynamic change and articulations at measure 15. The clarinets and saxophones should play their eighth notes light, short and crisp. The tenor saxophone and horns should play their part in a marcato style.

Measure 27 should take on more of a legato style. The beat pattern should become 3+2+2. The group should return to a marcato style in measure 38. The tenor saxophones and horns should again return to a light and staccato style.

Measure 46 should have a lighter and quasi dance style to it. Dynamic contrast is crucial throughout this section.

From measures 77 to 81, the ensemble should pay close attention to the notated dynamics. Measure 82 has a guitar folk tune feel to it. This should be played with that folk guitar in mind.

Measure 116 should be played lightly in all instruments with straight eighth notes. Also, please pay special attention to the accents in this section. Make sure that the solo parts can be heard throughout.

At measure 135, the articulations and dynamics are crucial. The dynamic change should be instant here. At measure 154, the parts with straight eighth notes should be light and the melody should be marcato. Beware of the beat pattern changing throughout this section.

I wish you and the band a wonderful performance of Courage Undaunted.
