PROGRAM NOTE

Journey Imagined musically illustrates a daydream; a fantastical trip represented in three distinct parts. Each section specifically correlates with an element that any great journey, imaginary or otherwise, should include. After a dreamy introduction, the feeling of exhilaration begins with a syncopated melodic statement. The adventure theme follows after the key change ultimately leading to drama. The return of exhilaration closes the form. Transition material is inspired by the daydream concept, allowing ideas to come and go while maintaining a sense of consistency.

Composer Peter Sciaiano writes, "When sitting down to write this selection, I was most interested in creating a form that included three separate themes that worked together within one overarching concept. Ultimately, I found inspiration in the form of daydream. The design of visiting multiple melodies and styles, in a relatively short amount of time, seemed to lend itself to the concept of a wandering mind, yearning for experiences beyond any physical location."

NOTES TO CONDUCTOR

Teachable moments are found throughout this selection as the variety of styles lends itself to covering multiple concepts with students.

Journey Imagined also serves as an excellent contest selection for ensembles to demonstrate numerous understandings and performable skills.

The percussion section is asked to play many roles throughout. It's important to stress the difference between impact and texture so players are confident in their role and can seamlessly integrate with the winds.

The woodblock often acts as a "wake up call" within the daydream. This is an important auxiliary percussion instrument throughout the piece.

Trombonists can begin the "rip" (from concert F to C) at measure 65 in sixth position. Rehearsing this technique to improve tuning and effectiveness is recommended.
