About the Music

The 19th-century English text added to this 16th-century French tune pronounces “Ding Dong!” with enthusiasm as indicated by the exclamation point. It continues “in heav’n the bells are ringing...let steeple bells be swungen...prime your matin chime, ye ringers...,” exhorting all to jubilation.

The tune has a rich background. In 1589, Thoinot Arbeau’s Orchésographie, a treatise on the dance, was published in France. Along with instructions on the dance forms of the period, it includes 50 tunes that correspond to the dances. Among them is this tune Branle de o'fficial, which later became known as Ding Dong! Merrily on High. Orchésographie also inspired Peter Warlock's Capriol Suite.

Ringing half and whole notes simulate the chiming of bells in this arrangement of the Renaissance melody. Some are accented, some are not, and others are pizzicato. But all represent celebratory church bells.
