About the Music

Ottorino Respighi lived in the latter part of the 19th and early part of the 20th centuries. He was one of a number of composers who set out to write music in forms other than those 'mechanical and mathematical formulaic puzzles' that had become popular in the early 20th century. Think tone-row/serial music, as an example.

Respighi had long been fascinated by music of the Baroque era, but more especially melodies and forms from the Renaissance era. Between 1917 and 1932, Respighi borrowed and arranged a series of lute pieces (largely anonymous) from this period. He kept all the basic melodic and rhythmic elements intact, but brought them, ostensibly, into the musical language of the 20th century. These works were put together in various collections, or suites. Three such suites are known as Ancient Airs and Dances. Another famous work from this genre is his Gli Ucelli (The Birds).

Here is an arrangement of the first movement from his Ancient Airs, Suite I (completed in 1917). Originally written for 2 flutes, 2 oboes +english horn, 2 bassoons, 2 horns, 1 trumpet, harp and strings, this strings only arrangement of Respighi's Balletto offers the opportunity to introduce melodic, rhythmic and harmonic elements from the Renaissance, combined with a more modern compositional style.
