About the Music

Mozart's Symphony No. 29 in A Major is one of the earlier works in which Mozart truly found his own 'voice'. As Maynard Solomon said in Mozart – A Life, "at a certain point in his development, a gifted young composer... speaks in a tongue that has not previously been heard...."

At age 18 (1774), Mozart had already completed 28 works that are today known as 'symphonies', although a number of the earliest works are very basic in form and scope. The Allegro moderato (first movement), presented here in a string arrangement, contains that delicate Mozartian balance between graceful lyricism and his signature, tempestuous energy and intensity. Mozart, during his later years, recognized this symphony's beauty, as he performed it as a regular part of concerts given across Europe. It was clearly one of his favorites.

It is my wish that you, your students and your audiences enjoy this opportunity to perform a small piece of Mozart's genius!
