About the Music

Georg Philipp Telemann was a German born composer from the late Baroque era. He lived and worked in major musical centers such as Leipzig, Eisenach and Hamburg. Telemann was mostly self-taught, and for a period of time studied law. Eventually, however, his interests and talents in music consumed his life.

A highly prolific composer, Telemann left us a huge range of works for strings, from solo sonatas and concertos to concerti grossi for single players, to concertos for four soloists. His music provided important links in form and style to the earliest forms and works in the classical style.

The Grave and Allegro, drawn from his Concerto No. 2 in D Major for Four Violins, provides an outstanding opportunity to work on sonority and tone, and then – by contrast – clarity of rhythm and clean, matching baroque bow strokes. Telemann's works require a high degree of diligence and focus on 'tight ensemble'. This pair of contrasting movements makes for an outstanding concert opener or closer!
